NEWSPAPER TAX LEVIED: FEW CAN AFFORD DAILY 6 PENCE

NEW YORK CITY - The takes it in turn to pay the tax, and pays it with a glee that is tantamount to it paying it in reverse. Through the tax, ordinary people are able to read the news, while they are also able to keep up to date with the news. However, while this may seem like a good idea, it is not always the case. In some cases, the tax can be as high as 6 pence, which is not a small amount of money.

The tax on newspapers has been in effect since 1732. It was introduced to help finance the war with France. The tax was initially set at 3 pence, but it was increased to 6 pence in 1741. Over the years, the tax has been adjusted several times, but it has never been removed.

The tax works by deducting a small amount from the cost of each newspaper. This amount is added to the cost of the newspaper, and the total cost is then paid by the subscriber. The tax is collected by the newspaper company, and it is then passed on to the government.

In recent years, there have been calls to abolish the tax. Some argue that it is unfair, as it disproportionately affects poorer people. Others argue that it is necessary, as it helps to fund the daily production of newspapers.

The tax on newspapers has been a controversial issue for many years. It has been argued that it is unfair, and that it unfairly affects poorer people. However, it also helps to fund the daily production of newspapers, and it is therefore a necessary part of the system.
